AN IMPRESSIVE MOMENT IN THE HISTORY OF THE REPUBLIC.

Pro bono publico.
- JNO. S. DAVIS.

[From the N. Y. Herald.] Anarchism in this country has rebeen told with the terrible emphasis of a degree of exasperation and acerbity a fourfold execution that the American which is unbecoming in a party boss people will have none of it,

Bakunin, the ideal of the anarchist, declares that "between him-the revolutionist-and society reigns the war of but always steady and unpardoning."
That is to say, the design of the That is to say, the design of the anarchist is to demolish all government; and he advocates the use of dynamite as the readlest means of accomplishing his purpose. He may honestly believe that social chaos is better than social order, or he may be an adventurer who plies the torch for the sake of plunder-with that we have nothing to do. He openly asserts all public buildings-these are the aims of the anarchists as expressed by theinselves. The citizens of this republic

[From the St. Louis Post-Dispatch.] The November elections of 1887 have not only decided the democratic nomination for president, but have pretty clearly indicated that the country has not yet made up its mind to restore power to the republican party. The election of a good working majority of democrats to the house last year, in the middle of Mr. Cleveland's term, when reactionary influences and dissatisfac-tion with his appointments and with the first development of his policy were most powerful, has been followed in 1887 by a still more significant dec-laration of continued and increased popular confidence in the administra-tion and in democratic ascendency.

BLAINE'S DISAPPOINTMENT.

[From the N. Y. Herald.] Dispatches said to have been received from Mr. Blaine allege that he was very much disappointed by the fact that the state of New York went dem-ocratic. The increased republican vote in Ohio has had a depressing effect upon Mr. Blaine's triends. They infer that the democratic victory in New York and republican gains in Ohio are calculated to advance the interests of Senator John Sherman as an aspirant for the presidential nomination.
